A woman with a noble purpose

Mrs. Helen Nunzio

It is with great pleasure and pride that we dedicate our yearbook to Mrs. Helen Nunzio, an extraordinary individual and a master teacher. We feel that she embodies the highest ideals of her profession.

Mrs. Nunzio is loved by her students, because she loves and understands them. Her warmth, perception, and uncanny sense of humor are comforting and refreshing to troubled students. Her humanity is derived from her actual acquaintance with the vagaries of human life. She is an experienced and a learned student of life as it is.

Mrs. Nunzio is admired by her colleagues and students, because she is an impassioned fighter for intellectual honesty. Integrity and honesty are the ideals that loom large in her life. She has a deep respect for intellectual achievement and challenging ideas. Ideas never frighten her; she entertains thoughts as she would guests!

As a teacher, she is consistently stimulating, because she teaches with vigor and devotion. Her heart and enthusiasm are put into her work. She draws upon an extensive literary background, and she knows how to relate knowledge to life. Her view of life is cosmopolitan; she reaches into the deepest feelings of her students, and she is effective, because she knows them. Mrs. Nunzio will never withhold her energies, time, or efforts from a student in need.

Mrs. Nunzio is an accomplished and sensitive poet who can stir mind and heart. She has an empathy for the unfortunate, the disadvantaged, the lost soul, and fates misbegotten. Her perception of the reality of life makes her approachable to all those who seek advice and assistance. She is always a human being and then a teacher.

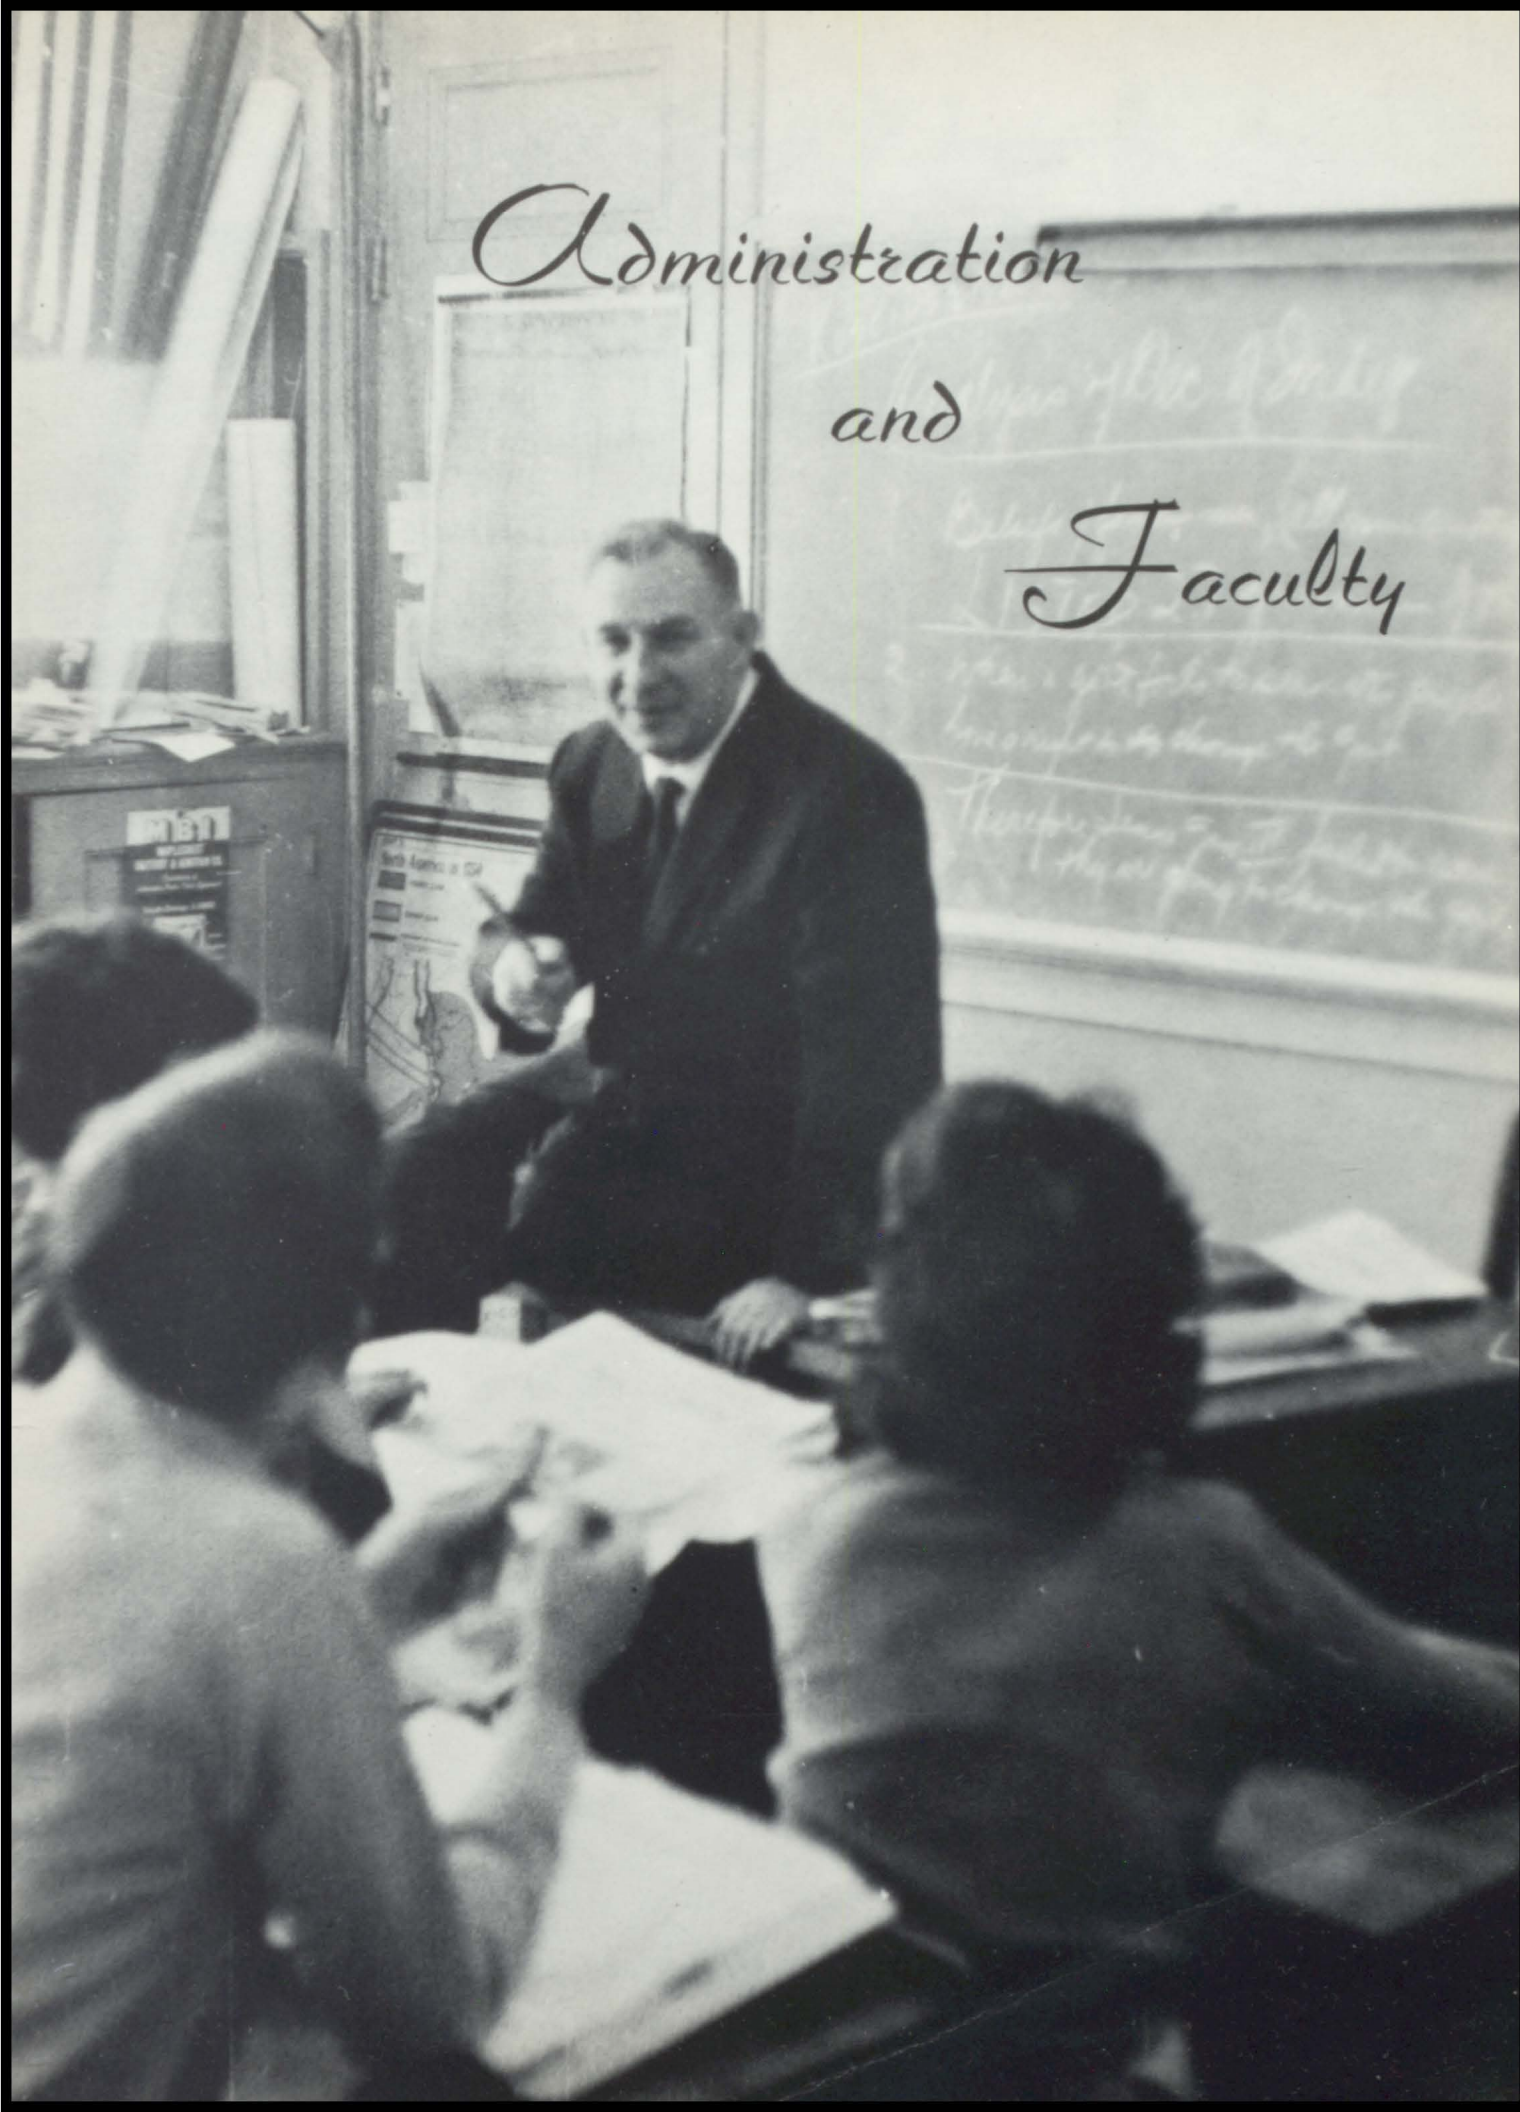

Mrs. Helen Nunzio taught us that you don't live a life of lies; you must live a life of truth. We will never forget her lesson, nor her example.

Remembrance of Things Past

It seems as if it were only yesterday that we, a group of not-so-tall kids, entered Barringer High School. Actually, it was three years ago. In a few days, we will be graduated. Time passes quickly. They were three wonderful years . . . years of fun and laughs galore. There were many good times sandwiched in between the studies and the exams. The friendships we made will be treasured. These were years of growth and change. Many of our cherished ideas and concepts were modified; some were completely abandoned; others were exchanged for newer, truer thoughts.

Ambition was kindled and given direction. We developed poise and maturity. We learned to look at the world with greater sophistication. Decision-making became more logical. We discovered that the price of our actions was the consequences. Spiritual values were more meaningful and significant. Citizenship implied responsibilities and duties to be performed effectively. The necessity for proper and wise leadership was impressed upon us. We readily realized why our country's heritage was to be honored and cherished. We enthusiastically pledged ourselves to the preservation of this nation.

Our fellow classmates reflected different religious, national, and racial backgrounds; and they became our trusted friends.

Finally, we recognized that learning is a lifetime endeavor.

Aneid . . . Antigone . . . Macbeth . . . Crime and Punishment . . . The Doll's House . . . Desire Under the Elms . . . Brave New World Revisited . . . ideas to feed the intellectual appetite of English 8 students.

"The underdeveloped nations of the world are chiefly in the southern hemisphere . . . Three-fifths of the people of the world live on a subsistence level."

In United States History 4, Jerrilee Gasparino does original research by interviewing an officer about the crime rate in Newark.
